Course Description - Baseball 101

History and Appreciation - "Love is the most important thing in the world, but baseball is pretty good, too"- Yogi Berra. Baseball History is American History. In this class, we will explore the history of the game, from its origins to the present day. We will see how baseball was born, grew up, and matured to become more than just a game, but our national pastime. Along the way, we'll learn about the players and other characters who have become legends. We will see how baseball is part of the bigger story of our country. We'll also learn how to appreciate the game through fun exercises and projects that highlight the finer points of play. Wear your team gear and join us! It's going to be a Homerun!

Your Instructor: Joshua Geier

My name is Joshua Geier and I grew up right here on Long Island! I graduated from CUNY Queens College where I studied History, with a focus on Middle Eastern studies. A little bit about me... I love baseball and grew up idolizing Derek Jeter. I was a pitcher in high school but was also a student of the game. I can't wait to share my experience with students! I currently work for the Center for Community Inclusion, where our focus is on improving outcomes for students with disabilities. Presently my job title is administrative assistant, and one of my main responsibilities includes, the creation/maintenance of our social media presence. I have worked with students with disabilities since I was in high school, previously working with the Adler Center at the Mid-Island Y JCC. I love what I do, and I am very excited to continue this work with PBS!
