Everything But Acting

This class explores all aspects of theatrical productions that are not acting. This includes, but is not limited to:

- set lighting
- sound engineering
- set design and construction
- costume design

Students will learn the foundations of creating a show's overall aesthetic through these multiple creative elements and how particular artistic decisions are made. We will learn how these elements of the theater combine to create a production. We will take field trips on campus to the Staller Center, to see different types of theaters and to speak to guest artists who are experts in their field.

This will be a project based class where each student will be expected to work on their projects at home and provide any materials they require for their own projects. Students will need to provide their own materials for their projects.

Meet the Instructor

Debi Gross: Debi got her Masters in Theater Arts at Stony Brook University and loves sharing theater with others.

She is a Lab Coordinator in the Social Competence & Treatment Lab at SBU Psychology. Among her many duties there, she has been an interventionist in the Lab's Social Groups for Youth with ASD study.

She looks forward to bringing this class to the PBS Adult Continuing Education on the campus of Stony Brook University.

PBS Adult Continuing Education classes are taught using various instructional methods tailored to the specific needs of adult learners. Students will be encouraged to develop critical thinking, research and study skills, and utilize technology for learning and collaboration. All students inherently benefit from being engaged in an active college environment.
